*T3 - Bio*

Tom Brown III, known as "T3", is a professional photographer and expert in ancestral living skills, Nature Connection, Naturalist studies, animal tracking, and nature immersion. Born in New Jersey in 1978, he learned these skills from his father, Tom Brown Jr, founder of the Tracker School. After wandering across America, Tom has taught these skills for 24 years. Now residing in Oregon, he launched FutureNature and T3photography to blend his passions for nature education and photography. In the last 15 years, having witnessed firsthand, the profound effect that a prolonged time in nature has on a human. FutureNature offers global classes on wilderness skills, self-reliance, nature connection, and how to lead a happier healthier life while still existing in the modern world. while T3photography aims to reveal nature's beauty through his lens. Since receiving his first Nikon camera in 1984, Tom has developed a lifelong passion for photography, particularly macro photography. Tom continually explores human interactions and the natural world when not teaching or photographing, asking, "What's happening here? What is this teaching me?"

*T3 - About himself and his classes*

I practice ancestral living skills and the philosophy of living close to the earth and nature. I choose to embrace "the way of the caretaker" because I believe it is our duty to ensure that every space, place, and person we encounter is better off after meeting us. This could be as simple as picking up trash, giving someone a hug when they need it, or sitting and listening to truly understand and empathize with another person's emotions.

When it comes to the skills I teach these days, I focus on a few key areas, particularly awareness, which I believe is the most important skill in life. This includes associated skills such as movement, utilizing all our physical senses, and awakening our instincts that modern society has dulled. I teach these skills through various channels, including my online classes, YouTube videos, Instagram posts, and both online and in-person classes. You can find more information on my main website:

Unfortunately, I have encountered significant personal and financial setbacks over the past 2 years. Despite these challenges and sometimes excessive demands, I have managed to run classes, book photography work, and offer both private and public online classes. However, I am still struggling to find enough students to make a living. While everything is growing, it's not happening quickly enough to supplement my income from teaching and photography.

I have a GoFundMe campaign:

Patreon https://www.patreon.com/tom\_brown3?utm\_campaign=creatorshare\_creator to help subsidize my video work and cover editing and filming costs.

One day, I hope to visit Europe in person to teach classes and explore the beautiful eco-regions, but for now, I offer several online options. The first is what I call the "all-in-one." For $200 USD, you get to attend eight 2-hour-long live webinars and receive recordings afterward. These beginner-level classes are suitable for teenagers to adults and cover topics such as:

1. Wilderness Survival 101
2. Wild-Edible Plants and Ethical Foraging
3. Stealth and Natural Movement
4. Urban Survival
5. Awareness: The Most Important Life Skill
6. Animal Tracks and Signs
7. The Way of the Caretaker
8. Nature Photography

**Other Online Classes**

I currently offer three other public online classes, each consisting of five 2-hour Zoom sessions, costing $250 USD. These classes cover:

- Bone Tools and Jewelry Making
- Nature Photography: Through My Eyes
- Awareness: The Way of the Caretaker

Each class has its own online meeting space where participants can share photos of their work, ask questions, and receive homework assignments and videos recorded between sessions. It is very important to me to provide as consistent support as possible for this online meeting space. The schedule varies, sometimes offering sessions once a month or twice a month, to give participants time to work with the information and allow me to prepare without. You can register for these classes on the class schedule page of my website: www.tombrown.com/schedule

I also offer private mentoring sessions on various skills, both physical and spiritual.
